

When you are trustworthy, people know that you are honest and truthful.

When you treat people fairly, you show that you value them and that you know right from wrong.

A caring person understands other people and offers to help them whenever possible.

Helping people is one way of showing respect.

Everyone in a family should take some responsibility for helping out with family chores.

Being a good citizen means respecting your country.

How does YOUR family show its values?

